PROJECT PIPELINE

2024 Summer Architecture Camp

DESIGN JUSTICE:

THE EDUCATION TO ACTION PIPELINE

Our mission is to empower young people to affect change in their community through design. These learning sessions enable students to learn about the built environment from architects, designers, and planners. NOMA advocates for equity and design excellence, and aims to foster the next generation of design professionals and civic leaders.

PROJECT PIPELINE CAMP:

Pipeline students are asked to think creatively about their community and are given the opportunity to investigate how they can best influence those spaces. Camp days include hands-on activities and learning sessions designed to encourage students to synthesize and interpret new information as they design a new building for their community to engage with. Project Pipeline attendees possess a broader understanding of building design. They return to their communities with the knowledge needed to create spaces that improve the neighborhoods, locales, and cities they come from.
